Abstract

In the era of ensemble-based modeling, the term history matching has become somewhat controversial. Can we approach this problem space without being trapped as an obsessed perfectionist, overconfident scientist, overloaded power user or confused end user? Can we find better ways of combining simplicity and automation so that we can spend more time on understanding? Let's discuss!